Bill Kurtis

FROM TV JOURNALIST TO RANCHER:
THE CREATIVE LIFE OF BILL KURTIS
October 21, 2010

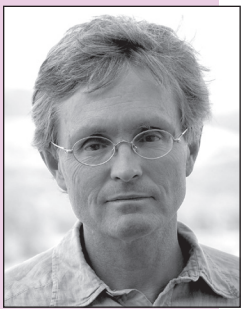

Bill Kurtis has looked at his life as a series of opportunities since he first traded in his law degree for a chance to come to Chicago as a television reporter over 40 years ago. Since then, he has written books, had his photographs professionally exhibited, become a spokesperson for the environment through his work on several not-for-profit boards, made a splash with his cameo appearances in films and commercials and, most recently, purchased a ranch in his home state of Kansas, where he has restored the prairie and introduced a line of grass-fed cattle under the "Tallgrass" label.

Jeremy Schmidt

AN ARMCHAIR EXPEDITION
ACROSS THE WORLD
November 18, 2010

National Geographic writer, photographer and biologist Jeremy Schmidt has taken his readers to the world's most breathtaking places, from Yellowstone and the Grand Tetons to Central Asia's Sayan Mountains, where he went on assignment to search for the last reindeer nomads. An adventure traveler on six continents, Schmidt has lived with eagle hunters and shamans, been a park ranger and winter keeper. His award-winning Himalayan Passage describes a nine-month journey by bicycle, truck and on foot across Tibet, Mongolia, India, Nepal and Pakistan with his wife and two friends. "This was not some hard-guy solo adventure," Schmidt notes. "The women were totally capable."

Claire Copping Cross

GRAND HOUSES & GARDENS
OF ENGLAND & IRELAND
January 20, 2011

Art historian and veteran traveler Claire Copping Cross offers a glimpse into the lives lived in the "great and good places" of England and Ireland. She begins at Ham House near London—its 17th century furnishings intact, its formal gardens restored—and ends in Wicklow County, Ireland at the majestic Powerscourt estate, originally a 13th century castle. Between are Malmesbury Abbey in Wiltshire, expanded and lovingly tended by the Pollards, known as the "naked gardeners;" Sissinghurst, resurrected from a broken-down manor house, with gardens created by that wild lady of letters, Vita Sackville West; and Glin Castle on the banks of the River Shannon.

Michael Drew

THAT AFTERNOON WITH
LUNT AND FONTANNE
March 17, 2011

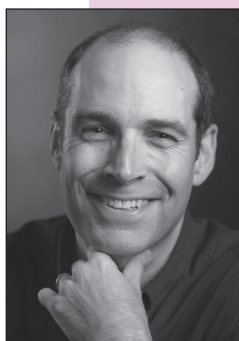

On a snowy February day in 1967, Milwaukee Journal columnist Mike Drew came to Genesee Depot, Wisconsin, to interview Alfred Lunt and Lynn Fontanne at Ten Chimneys, the estate where they spent their down time. Drew re-creates that unforgettable afternoon with the first couple of American theatre, bringing them to life through his personal recollections. He also brings rare footage of their film and TV performances and TV interviews, and stories about the Lunts recounted by fellow actors. Drew also discusses the restoration of Ten Chimneys, once threatened with demolition but now a national treasure and a resource for theatre and the arts.

Geoffrey Baer

CHICAGO FROM THE RIVER:
THE NEW BOAT TOUR
April 21, 2011

WTTW producer and program host Geoffrey Baer takes you on a virtual tour of the Chicago River—from the famous downtown district to seldom seen stretches north and south of the city. The river offers a view unseen anywhere else. It's an excellent vantage point from which to appreciate the fascinating mix of soaring contemporary skyscrapers and majestic neoclassical buildings, and visit historic river-edge neighborhoods like Bridgeport, Pilsen, Chinatown, Lincoln Park and Ravenswood Manor. Beyond architecture, Baer brings in the river's colorful history, including the amazing transformation of industrial areas, guiding us through the hidden places that were once known as "Mud Lake," "Bubbly Creek" and "Little Hell."
